

4 Universities and Colleges Universités et collèges

Highlights

- At the end of 2009, Canadian universities and colleges had accumulated more than $10 billion in endowment funds, calculated at market value, a decrease of 17.0% over 2008.
- Student-teacher ratios at Canadian universities increased in 2008-2009 to 23.6. This figure should be treated with caution, however, as much of the undergraduate teaching at Canadian universities is performed by contract academic staff who are not included in the annual survey of full-time university academic staff.
- In 2009 the average salary and benefit packages paid to university presidents in Canada increased less than 1% over 2008 for reporting institutions. The highest paid Canadian university president now receives more than $700,000 in salary and benefits.

- In 2009 the average salary and benefit packages paid to college presidents in Canada increased by 2.7% over 2008 for reporting institutions. While salaries paid to college presidents are still lower on average than those paid to university presidents, the salary gap between them is narrowing.

Points saillants

- À la fin de 2009, les universités et les collèges du pays avaient accumulé plus de dix milliards de dollars en fonds de dotation selon la valeur du marché, soit une baisse de 17,0 % par rapport à 2008.

- Le rapport étudiants-enseignant dans les universités canadiennes a légèrement augmenté à 23,6 en 2008-2009. Cependant, il faut faire preuve de circonspection à l'égard de ces données, car une grande part de l'enseignement au baccalauréat est assurée par des membres du personnel universitaire contractuel qui ne figurent pas dans l'enquête annuelle sur les membres du corps professoral à temps plein.

- En 2009, le salaire et les avantages sociaux moyens des rectrices et recteurs d'université au pays ont augmenté moins de 1 % par rapport à 2008. Le salaire et les avantages sociaux les plus élevés pour ce poste se chiffrent actuellement à plus de 700 000 $.

- En 2009, le salaire et les avantages sociaux moyens des présidentes et présidents de collège au pays ont augmenté de 2,7 % par rapport à 2008. Si ces salaires demeurent en moyenne inférieurs à ceux des rectrices et recteurs d'université, l'écart salarial se rétrécit.
