

Neptune Theatre has two different performance spaces, each with their own individual entrance. There is the Scotiabank Stage and the Fountain Hall Stage. Both entrances are located on the 'water side' of Argyle Street. The Scotiabank Stage is located around the middle of the block between Sackville Street and Blowers Street. When facing the entrance to the Scotiabank Stage, it is to the left of a restaurant called The Pint which is to the left of another establishment called Pizza Pizza, which is on the corner of Argyle Street and Blowers Street. The Fountain Hall Stage is located on the corner of Argyle Street and Sackville Street.

The following directions are for how to get to the theatre from Barrington Street.

If you are taking the following bus routes, follow the subsequent directions:

- 1 Spring Garden to Mumford Terminal
- 7 Robie
- 8 Sackville Terminal
- 9A Greystone-Fotherby via Mumford Terminal
- 9B Herring Cove Via Mumford Terminal
- 14 Leiblin Park

Disembark at Barrington Street before Sackville Street (Stop number 6121). When leaving the bus, turn left and walk North-West-North on Barrington Street to Sackville Street. At the first corner, turn left and use the crosswalk going West-South West to cross Barrington Street. Please note: this is not an audible crosswalk, but does have lights to stop traffic. Please also note this portion of the journey will be uphill. Continue to walk up Sackville Street. Turn left at the first corner you come across onto Argyle Street. This corner will have the Fountain Hall Theatre entrance on your left. If you continue to walk along Argyle Street, you will come to the Scotiabank Theatre entrance. The Scotiabank Theatre entrance will be on your left, immediately before The Pint restaurant. If you come to another corner, you will have gone too far.

We have staff stationed just inside the entrances to both the Fountain Hall and the Scotiabank Stages, to help make sure patrons get to the right spot.
